

WATER SILO BEERSEL

2008, Beersel, Belgium

A water droplet levitated by forest trees.

In a contemporary way the new water silo symbolizes it's function. A drop of water adapts to its environment. In a free fall it's aerodynamic, lying on a leaf it's flatter and rounded.

Like a huge drop of dew, the new water silo is lifted by the trees. The shiny skin reflects the sky; the sun's rays will reflect deep into the forest. The mirroring skin reflects the image of the existing landscape. The drop shows us it's surroundings.

partners

BAS-Dirk Jaspaert, Leuven

awards

first prize competition "open oproep"

team

Adriaan Geuze, Maarten van de Voorde, Gaspard Estourgie, Pieter Hoen, Perry Maas, Nik Naudts